IN THE ASIATIC WAR ZONE

Few People Have a Proper Idea of the Vast Amount of Territory Being Fought Over.

We read in the war news about the bombardment of Trebizond, the capture of Bitlis, the occupation of the territory along Lake Van, the sinking of a score of sailing boats on the Black sea. Few realize the territory that is being covered in those narratives. We all have at least a vague idea that the Black sea, for example, is a body of water in western Asia, on which Russians and Turks have been fighting since the war was declared.

It is likely that a majority of us have little conception of its size. If we think of area at all, we probably class it, in our mental pictures, along with Lake Michigan and Lake Erie. It does not occur to most readers of war news that almost seventeen Lake Eries would be required to equal the area of the Black sea. Indiana could be dropped in the middle of it almost without drawing the attention of those on shore to the splash.

Roughly speaking, the Black sea is 740 miles long and 390 miles wide. It covers an area approximately equal to that of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky. And it is smaller than the Caspian sea, the greatest inland lake in the world, which extends from Persian territory 760 miles northward into Russia. That sea has nearly twice the surface of all our great lakes combined, and may figure in the war news any day, illustrating anew that the eastern theater of action is the one of magnificent distances.—Indianapolis News.

HIS REST

She—Do you get a rest every summer, Mr. Bobbs?
He—Oh! yes. You see, I'm only in business; I'm not in society.

HALF SHAVES IN HISTORY.

Some of the British prisoners in German camps have been shaved, according to reports, on one side only of their heads and beards, this being done to prevent any attempt at escape. In history there have been other motives for half shaving. Hannun, king of the children of Ammon, shaved off half the beard of each of David's servants purely as an insult, and Jewish reverence for the beard forbade the servants from shaving the other half. One of the stories of Demosthenes has it that when he shut himself for months in a subterranean chamber to practice oratory he shaved half his head to offset any temptation to go abroad.

India's Love of Gold.

Complaints of India's appetite for gold began in the time of the Carthaginians, who in the fourth century B. C. disposed of gold they procured from Spain to that country. Pliny tells of unavailing protests made in the first year of the Christian era of exportations of the precious metal from the Roman empire, nearly $15,000,000 of it being sent annually to India. Queen Elizabeth, in 1599, tried in vain to counteract the flow of gold from her country to India.

She Broke Down Entirely.

Lan's, W. Va.—Mrs. T. T. Thot, of this place, says: "I had been troubled with womanly ailments for some time and at last I broke down entirely. I got so weak I could scarcely walk across the room. Thanks to Cardui I improved right off. Now I do my house work, and am feeling well." During the past 50 years, more than a million women have been benefited by taking Cardui. You must believe that Cardui will help you, to, since it helped all these others. Cardui is a safe harmless, vegetable remedy, of positive, curative merit, for women. A drug store. Try one bottle. It will surely help you.—Advertisement.

DEMORALIZING TRAFFIC.

"A man is not always to blame for being a jaywalker."

"I don't see what excuse he can offer."

"I might suggest a nifty pair of white kid boots with fur around the tops."

BOTH ELEMENTS.

Bill—Ever see him roll a cigarette?

Jill—No.

"Well, he does it like lightning."

"Well, I know they smell like thunder."

TOO SHARP FOR HIM.

"Why did you refuse when Brown suggested burying the hatchet?"

"Because I believe the cuss had an ax to grind."

GETTING BUSY.

"I'd like to know when you worship me, as you say."

"I suppose, dear, it is in my idol moments."

EXCEPTION NOTED.

"It is wicked to pay anybody hush money."

"Even when a man gives his poker winnings to his wife?"

SAFETY-FIRST MOVEMENT.

"He was on fire with love when he called on her."

"Well, what happened?"

"Her father put him out."

BIBLE NOT A "MUST BOOK"

"Good Fun to Read It," a Lecturer Tells His Audience at Minneapolis.

Such glowing epithets as "magnetic," "fascinating," "deliciously engaging" and "human" were directed toward the Bible by Professor Burton of the University of Minnesota, according to the Minneapolis Journal.

"The Bible is good fun to read. Pick it up impulsively, involuntarily as you would any other book," he told an audience of students and visitors in Minneapolis.

The discourse on the Bible was the last lecture in a running series on "Books Often Talked About but Seldom Read," which the university had offered to the public.

Defending the choice of the Bible for discussion among books seldom read, Doctor Burton declared that if the number of those who read the book perforce and those who read it nominally were subtracted and the total number of readers further reduced to those who read because of love of the reading, the justice of including the Bible in the series would become apparent.

"Reference to the attraction of the Bible goes with stock joke references to the goat and the mother-in-law," he said. "It is regarded in the popular mind as a 'must book,' an aristocratic, removed book."

Doctor Burton said the Bible was the most dramatic book in the world.

RIGHT WHERE HE BELONGED

Dilapidated Specimen of Humanity Offered Himself as a Specimen of "Woman's Work."

Great was the excitement in a small English town. The local ladies had decided to hold an exhibition of women's work, with a view to providing a treat for the poor children of the parish.

While the committee were busily engaged in arranging their exhibits to the best advantage in the parish hall, there came a timid knock at the outer door. When the door was opened a strange-looking object entered. It, or rather, he, was a man. His face was a mass of scratches, his hair stood out round his head like tufts of grass, his collar was dangling loosely behind, and his clothes were little better than rags.

"Please, I've come!" he said, simply.

"But—but—" stammered the honorary secretary. "This is not a museum; it's for a display of specimens of women's work only."

"That's all right!" he replied, dejectedly. "I am a specimen of woman's work!"

NOVEL BATTLE.

A dispatch from Millville, N. J., tells of a battle between a skunk and a snake. We had thought that we had observed the most romantic fight in all the world one time in Porto Rico between a lizard and a scorpion, but this one, between a large and lusty polecat and a six-foot snake eclipses utterly the modest encounter we witnessed. For a half hour that battle raged, until at last the skunk managed to fasten its teeth in the back of the snake, and that closed the reptile's career. Bravo, for the skunk, everybody will say, but the hunters, who watched the conflict, proceeded to kill the skunk, a most shameful treatment of a beautiful and courageous little brute that took it upon itself to inflict the curse of Eden.—Columbus (O.) Journal.

HER VIEWS.

"My husband is rich."

"Still, you should not be extravagant."

"Well, now, it would be foolish to try to hash up left-over terrapin."

HIS COSTLY MISTAKE.

"What ruined your business?"

"Advertising."

"How?"

"I let it all be done by my competitors."

HIS QUALIFICATION.

"Do you think Ned would 'sue' for us in our play?"

"I'm sure he would, for he's a brother of a boy."
